While We Go Marching For Flory.

[Air: "Marching Through Georgia."]
Up and girt your saddles, boys!
And buckle on your guns,
And when you've touched the stirrups,
Have your horses on the run;
We'll show them in Missouri,
How a battle we've begun,
While we go marching for Flory.

CHORUS:
Hurrah! Hurrah! We'll set Missouri free,
Hurrah! Hurrah! We'll vote for Joe Flory;
The railway boys and working men,
Will join the jubilee,
While we go marching for Flory.

Flory will be Governor,
And steer the Ship of State;
Allen will be by his side,
To seal the "Poppies" fate;
The friends of every working man,
Will vote the ticket straight
While we go marching for Flory.

Election day will soon be on,
And then we'll all rejoice;
Mechanics and the farmers,
Will join the railroad boys;
The bells will ring, the whistles blow,
And make a mighty noise,
While we go marching for Flory.

Democratic Boodle.

(Special correspondence.)
New York, August 31.—It must not be supposed that the Democratic National Committee is going to be without funds in this political campaign. In fact it is abundantly in funds at present, and all signs indicate that it will continue to be "flush" throughout. That is already evident from the way in which Chairman Jones and his committee are spending money, and furthermore, it is not hard to imagine, or indeed to find out exactly, where immense amounts of the "dough" are coming from.

The New York World, the leading Democratic paper here, has stated positively in so many words that William A. Clark of Montana (whom it calls "Ex-Senator" as if he had been in the Senate), gave his check just before he sailed for Europe to Chairman Jones, for $100,000, promising to do more and better later on if it should be necessary—and of course it will be necessary.

The World also quotes "Senator" Clark's friends as declaring that the Montana multi-millionaire and briber would rather give $500,000 than see the electoral vote of his own state cast for McKinley.

It is difficult to realize that so much money could be spent for such a purpose in so comparatively small a state, yet those who are best posted about such matters consider it entirely possible, in view of what Mr. Clark has done in similar directions hitherto. It goes without saying that Clark and his Montana delegation were not admitted to the Kansas City Convention without his agreeing to do something handsome in return; and Clark has evidently made a beginning, though perhaps a small one, in doing that handsome thing.

The world, by the way, prints a fac-simile of the Clark check for $100,000, so that its existence would seem to have been real.

Senator Chandler of New Hampshire is well remembered for his extraordinary and successful efforts to keep William A. Clark out of the Senate; and now it is a commonly accepted fact in New Hampshire that Clark is going to return these courtesies by spending no end of money, all that might be required, to defeat Mr. Chandler for re-election. It is doubtful if this kind of thing will go in New Hampshire, especially if it becomes sufficiently well known that Clark is determined upon that course. The incident, doubtless a true one, is sufficient to illustrate, however, that Clark has all kinds of money to spend, a fact long well known; and that he is willing to spend it, and he is not much more particular about the locality where his leg is pulled than he is about the method by which the act is done.

The Democrats, as is well known, are in control of almost all of the large cities, and as no jealousy for civil service reform concerns them when they get in, it follows that nearly all of the office holders in the large cities are Democrats. So staunch an anti-expansion paper as the New York Herald declares that half a million dollars will be raised among the Democratic office holders of New York and Brooklyn. This is entirely credible, and if that much can be done in these localities alone, it is an indication that ten times as much money could probably be raised in other Democratic cities, all taken together, especially since Mr. Bryan pointed out that the Bryanite campaign is very fortunate in having control of the organization in the chief cities. Perhaps this is the real reason that he had in mind for congratulating himself.

Worth Millions to Missouri.

Democratic editors seem inclined to criticize Joe Flory, to discuss the Philippine war, to consider matters in Cuba and China, and to revert to Republican rule of 80 years ago. But they don't appear to desire to get down to Missouri affairs. They don't take up those solid facts that Richard Dalton fired into their camp. They don't tell why taxes have been decreased on corporations and increased on the farm lands of the State. Democrats frequently make a profession of being the people's party, of standing for the interests of the masses and of favoring legislation that will put more of the burdens of the government on the shoulders of the railways and other corporate interests. But the stern facts prove that this pretense is a glittering fraud and falsehood in Missouri. Prominent Democratic papers admit it, but promise that the Democratic party will be good if the people will again return it to power. The farmers and workingmen have it in their power to strike a blow in their own interest this year that will do a world of good. They should not let the opportunity pass by unimproved. They should relegate the Democratic party and elect Joe Flory governor and with him a Republican Legislature. That would try the spirit. It would put both parties to the test. It would compel legislation in the interest of the masses. Will the people of this State study their own personal interests, or will they continue to be duped and wronged by the duplicity of selfish politicians? What reasons has any farmer for voting the Democratic ticket? Why should workingmen vote for Democrats who have placed the heavy burden of State upon their shoulders and taken them off the corporations while pretending to be the friends of the people? It is bad policy for one set of politicians to own a State anywhere. Frequent changes in the administration of public affairs put all parties on their good behavior and a Republican governor and State administration would be worth millions of dollars to the people of Missouri. It would lead to a new adjustment of taxes in which the corporations would have to pay their fair share. It would also break the old Democratic ring and relegate Bourbonism to innocuous desuetude. It would mean that new men have come to the helm and that a more liberal and enlightened public policy would be inaugurated. Such a change would invite the capital and genius of the East to the great natural wealth of Missouri and then the empire State of the West would begin that career of expansion and development to which the finger of her high destiny points. Missouri is probably the greatest natural store-house of the world. Her products of wheat and corn and tobacco and fruit, her vast deposits of lead and zinc, her mountains of coal and iron, her quarries of granite and her forests of timber are to be the potential factors of the greatest industrial development in the history of this continent. Here the Great Architect of the universe has piled up in infinite profusion alluring treasures and what the people of this magnificent commonwealth must do is to open her doors to the art and genius of the outside world by an enlightened public policy. Then Missouri will get into the running and become a competitor for the first place in the bright galaxy of stars in the American union. Yes, we affirm that a Republican governor will be worth millions to the people of this magnificent State. Now, the question is up to the voters. Will they give the grand old State a big shove and start her along the shining course of destiny, or will they continue to bare their necks to the yoke of the ring of bosses at Jefferson City?—Springfield Republican.

TELLS STRANGE STORY.

A Spider Said to Have Woven Name of McKinley in His Web at Granada, Mo.

One of the most peculiar and wonderful things that has happened in this community for many a year and one that has caused a great deal of speculation and thought, as well as caused some fear among the more superstitious, is a spider with his web at the home of J. B. Andrews, about one and a half miles north of Granada, says the Granada Times.

About a month ago Mr. Andrews first noticed that a spider, of a rather peculiar species, the like of which he had never before seen, was spinning a web in his house. The manner in which the spider worked and the character of the insect attracted his attention and he concluded not to disturb it, but to watch it for a while.

The first he noticed was just an ordinary web, but in a few days the spider made a banner, some two inches wide and two feet in length and stretched it across the web in the fashion of a banner hung across a street. In the day time the spider would weave letters upon this banner, the letters being about one and a half inches in length. They were not of single web, but were wove in thick, so that a child could easily discern what letters they were. For a few days it would make different letters but they would spell no word. Each day it would weave different letters and in the evening destroy them only to begin again the next day. On last Friday it finally succeeded in spelling a word, and the word was "McKinley."

Mr. Andrews says that each and every letter was complete within itself and that it took no imagination to tell what the letters spelt.

Each evening the spider would roll up the banner the same as a person would roll up a piece of carpet, and then in the morning it would unroll it and stretch it across the web to leave it again till evening. Mr. Andrews called the attention of several parties to it and they all say that they will make affidavit as to the truth of the name.

In the meantime the spider kept right on increasing in size until it reached the proportion of a large sized tarantula, and Mr. Andrews began to become somewhat nervous of the strange phenomena, so one evening while he was watching Mr. Spider, he noticed that instead of rolling up the banner as it had heretofore it appeared to be eating it and to begin to get ready to leave, and for fear that it would escape he killed it.

Several parties were fortunate enough to see this strange phenomena and all agree that it was indeed, a peculiar and fascinating sight.

The question now arises, what did it mean.

Poisonous toadstool resembling mushrooms have caused frequent deaths this year. Be sure to use only the genuine. Observe the same care when you ask for DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. There are poisonous counterfeits. DeWitt's is the original Witch Hazel Salve. It is a safe and certain cure for all skin diseases.

A Lesson to Gossipers.

On Wednesday of last week Mrs. Carrie Edwards committed suicide at Lenox, Iowa. Before committing the rash act she wrote a letter from which we take the following excerpt:

"I have suffered so much in the last year both in mind and body I am not able to work and have been mistreated and lied about so much I cannot bear it any longer. I have tried to keep up for my child's sake, but feel now that she will be better off without me."

Poor woman! The unkind and untrue words that the gossipers used to defame her character drove her to madness and she ended all by taking her own life. To our mind her traducers are no better than murderers. It is the cruel, unkind word that goes into the heart like a dagger and makes wounds that can never be healed. It is just as easy to say a kind word as it is to say an unkind word. We have often wondered why a kind and all-wise Providence created the liar and gossip, but with us it remains an unsolved problem. The only thing that makes us believe in an orthodox hell is the existence of these vile creatures who go about assassinating character. They deserve a hell whose tortures have never been sufficiently described.—Worth County Times.
